Title: Subarachnoid small vein occlusion due to inflammatory fibrosis—a possible mechanism for cerebellar infarction in cryptococcal meningoencephalitis: a case report

Version: 1 Date: 11 Jun 2017

Reviewer: Ondrej Dolezal

Reviewer's report:

Authors answered all my questions, changed wording to avoid confusion and made things generally clearer. I am willing to accept pathologist's view that purely arterial occlusion would not lead to such massive oedema and that it is explainable by small veins' occlusion. Should not the title read cerebellar instead of cerebral? Authors are putting emphasis on posterior fossa involvement (including post mortem)

Minor language changes: p6,l3 put "for one months" into brackets, p7,l9 matter instead of mater, p9,l9 a soap bubble to be put into quotation marks as "a soap bubble sign", p12,l2 use common instead of crucial, etc.

Are the methods appropriate and well described?
