This is an interesting case report which is, in fact, uncommon, but not that rare. The reviewer can also recall one such case from his recent practice. Someone is curious to know more about the past medical history of this 69-year-old patient especially regarding pre-existent vascular disease since this likely also contributed to the delayed presence of vasospasm. Moreover, maybe the authors should have been more aggressive in an attempt to prevent the occurrence of vasospasm postoperatively, even if surgery was uneventful. It also recommended to modify the structure (and sequence of events) in the case presentation section since, in its current form, it creates some confusion to the reader.

Are the methods appropriate and well described?
If not, please specify what is required in your comments to the authors.
