Title: Chemical meningitis in children as a risk factor following craniopharyngioma resection – a case report

Version: 0 Date: 19 Nov 2019

Reviewer: Benedetta Pettorini

Reviewer's report:

The authors report and discuss one case of aseptic meningitis after open resection of craniopharyngioma.

The paper is well written and the case well-described.

Aseptic meningitis in craniopharyngioma surgery is well-reported in literature although it still represents an uncommon complication.

In view of the rarity of the event, I think this paper deserves to be published.

My advice is to expand the discussion about possible pathophysiology of the aseptic meningitis due to the content of the craniopharyngioma fluid.
