Reviewer's report

Title: Mirror syndrome. Resolution of maternal disease after successful fetal intrauterine therapy: a case series

Version: 0 Date: 09 Jan 2018

Reviewer: Kelly Cohen

Reviewer's report:

The authors describe two cases of presumed mirror syndrome with a basic review of the existing literature. There are no novel insights into the condition. The referenced paper by Braun et al has extensively reviewed all published cases of this condition, is relatively recent (2010), and covers the therapeutic interventions discussed in this submission. The same conclusions are drawn. As such this paper is of limited additional interest to the audience.

There are a number of grammatical errors which would need to be corrected prior to publication. For publication I would advise that the authors seek a new insight into the management of this condition, or add to this submission by offering a thorough review of the published literature since the Braun paper.

Are the methods appropriate and well described?
