Title: Varicella Zoster Virus-Associated Chorioretinitis: a Case Report

Version: 0 Date: 30 Nov 2017

Reviewer: Alejandro Fonollosa Calduch

Reviewer's report:

This is an interesting case of chorioretinitis secondary to VVZ infection. Just a few comments:

1. The authors state that they performed intraocular fluid analysis; what type of analysis was it: PCR, intraocular antibodies?

2. The authors should clarify why they used topical ganciclovir instead of acyclovir, since ganciclovir is indicated for CMV and acyclovir for VVZ and HSV

3. On describing autofluorescence imaging the authors should use "reflectivity" instead of "intensity"
