Title: A Comparison of Pediatric Ocular Injuries Based on Intention in Patients Admitted with Trauma

Version: 1 Date: 19 Nov 2018

Reviewer: Jian Li

Reviewer's report:

The present study reviewed a trauma database including patients less than 21 years old and analysed the demographic data, types of injury and intention. The data showed that "sight-threatening injuries were mostly associated with unintentional trauma in the youngest group and self-inflicted trauma in the oldest group." I appreciate the authors' effort on analysing these important information. In addition to the previous comments, I would like to invite the authors to clarify the following points:

1. Groupings of the patients are not appropriate to be presented in "statistical analysis" section.

2. Please indicate if a P value less than 0.05 will be considered as statistical significance.

3. Authors are required to refine and shorten the manuscript, especially for the discussion part. It would be improved by enhancing the clinical relevance of this study.
