Title: A cerebral Arteriovenous Malformation mistakenly diagnosed as Dry Eye and Glaucoma: a case report

Version: 0 Date: 21 Mar 2019

Reviewer: Riham Allam

Reviewer’s report:

1. AVM is known to be associated with secondary glaucoma and focal neurological symptoms. It is not clear from the manuscript what the authors are trying to report. So please try to validate your point of view in considering this as a case report.

2. You might want to point out that the anterior segment changes, in particular the episcleral hyperaemia, were subtle and so the diagnosis was delayed. If this is true an anterior segment photo could be added to elaborate on the difficulty in diagnosing such case.

3. A visual field is also recommended as an additional tool to localize intracranial malformations that can cause neurological field changes.

4. The authors did not mention any data regarding the baseline IOP or an optic disc photography that could be a clue in diagnosis.
