Reviewer’s report

Title: Watch out for the special location of intraventricular silicone oil following an intraocular tamponade - a 10-year follow-up case report based on CT/MRI.

Version: 1 Date: 06 Nov 2019

Reviewer: Yau Kei CHAN

Reviewer's report:

In the revised manuscript, the authors have tried to address or answer my questions.

I am happy with the corresponding changes.

The manuscript is ready to be accepted after addressing the following minor issues.
1. Please state within the manuscript, the limitation of not being able to estimate/measure the volume of silicone oil in the brain with the possible reasoning, as stated in the letter reply to the editor.
2. Refer to the second last question as raised by Dr. Tabuchi, after authors' amendment, the meaning of the last sentence in the conclusion is still not clear and indeed very confusing. First, the authors please state clearly the migration "of what" between eyeball and brain. Second, what do you mean by "alternative"? Third, how can you remove silicone oil in the brain?

Are the methods appropriate and well described?
If not, please specify what is required in your comments to the authors.

Yes

Does the work include the necessary controls?
If not, please specify which controls are required in your comments to the authors.

Unable to assess

Are the conclusions drawn adequately supported by the data shown?
If not, please explain in your comments to the authors.

Yes

Are you able to assess any statistics in the manuscript or would you recommend an additional statistical review?
If an additional statistical review is recommended, please specify what aspects require further assessment in your comments to the editors.
