Title: The association between electrodermal activity (EDA), depression and suicidal behaviour: A systematic review and narrative synthesis

Version: 1 Date: 23 Oct 2017

Reviewer: Bushra Nasir

Reviewer's report:

It is difficult to identify what updates have been made from the previous version, without a tracked changed document version. The manuscript is more readable, but my main concern is it still cannot be classified as a narrative synthesis, and is more a narrative review. As the authors have identified themselves, the nature of the papers included is highly varied, and it is difficult to present the outcomes in a systematic method. Given this, my recommendation would be to present the findings as a narrative review.

Are the methods appropriate and well described?
