General comments: Very interesting, well-written paper. Analyses are clear. Tables of results are clear as well.

Other comments:
The title should give an idea to readers the study population, so could make it "Factors associated..... of non-recommended foods among Dutch infants"

Reviewer finds the comment by the Medical ethics committee odd, but we can take this as ethical approval for the study.

Background lines 87-91- should indicate the country and study population among whom the study was done.

Positive practices among infants in day care is interesting. One would have expected the opposite. Day cares in Netherlands must be doing something right that points mothers in the right direction for infant feeding.

Are the methods appropriate and well described?
