This is an interesting article that is of current importance given the focus on multi sector approaches to improving nutrition. Some suggestions for the authors. There was a low response rate to the emails/phone calls used to solicit participants - 52%. Would be useful to indicate for those individuals who declined to participate, where there characteristics similar to those who did participate - examples, sectors, government, donors etc.

There is an extensive literature review but important areas - similar to this article - were not cited. For example Gillespie et al; Kennedy et al
