Title: Effects of the Home-based Educational Intervention on Health Outcomes among Primarily Hispanic Children with Asthma: A Quasi-Experimental Study

Version: 1 Date: 15 Jun 2019

Reviewer: Rajen Naidoo

Reviewer's report:

This is an interesting study, with useful findings.

The authors have adequately responded to the points raised by the previous review.

I have only two minor suggestions to make:

There is likely that a selection bias occurred given the large number of non-participants. This needs to be addressed in the Discussion, and its likely effect on the findings. This leads to my next comment: Although on two outcomes (asthma attacks and family emotional support) were statistically significant, is it possible that either the selection bias or the sample size influenced these outcomes? Is it possible to show some sample size or power calculations? I believe that these are important outcomes, and knowing whether there is truly no effect will provide a better understanding of this intervention.

My other minor comment is to please reflect the abbreviations used in Table 2 and 3 in the footnotes of the table.
