Reviewer's report:

The authors present a cross sectional study to show work productivity on a small sample of patients with RA. The manuscript is generally well written and clearly presented but the design and small sample size limits its generalizability.

There are just some minor comments on discussion section:
The discussion section needs to be tighter and more systematic and the main contributions and implications of the manuscript should be better clarified. The authors should put some more effort to make the work more accessible to practice.

Level of interest: An article whose findings are important to those with closely related research interests

Quality of written English: Needs some language corrections before being published
