Reviewer's report:

Even though the article addressed a conservative, recommended surgical approach, it was written incorrectly: English level is very poor and there are technical errors in writing a scientific article. The methods and the results are not constructed well. Additionally, I think the authors select a wrong test for the statistical analysis. The author should have selected a control group in which its participants have underwent a conservative treatment and or an open surgery. The discussion was very short; the authors did not debate their results in details with other approaches, and was written in a bad quality. I recommend rewriting and organizing the manuscript. They have to consult with some co-author who had an experience in publishing scientific articles and has a good level in English.
