Title: Surgical treatment of gastric venous congestion in association with extended resection of pancreas

Version: 0 Date: 25 Nov 2019

Reviewer: Petre Vlah-Horea Botianu

Reviewer's report:

Congratulations for the nice treatment of a difficult case. I have only a few comments to make:

1. What do you think that was the cause of this isolated stenosis at the junction between SpV and LGV?

2. Did you take into consideration to perform only an angioplasty instead a full section and anastomosis? Simple angioplasty is technically much more easy to perform.

3. The pictures show that the inferior mesenteric vein was draining into the superior mesenteric vein. Is this true? Do you think that this fact had any influence on development of an acute sectorial portal hypertension?

4. You mentioned the Barkow arcade and its role in the venous drainage of the stomach. Please give some more details.

Are the methods appropriate and well described?
