Title: Patients' and caregivers' experiences of using continuous glucose monitoring to support diabetes self-management: qualitative study

Version: 0 Date: 19 Nov 2017

Reviewer: Helmuth Martin Borkenstein

Reviewer’s report:

This an interesting study dealing with the patients as well as the caregivers findings and experiences of CGM to support diabetes self management.

The data could be of help for the medical team in an attempt to provide better information and training.

However the number of the participants is quite small, and the availability of data and material is limited. Most of the results given are personal statements of the participants, e.g. 'it is so much easier', 'I don't panic so much', and we don't know how many of the participants do think so.

Language is perfect,

Literature is very helpful.
