1. The title should be reviewed: It is nor a rare case report, but an uncommon oral contact reaction.

2. You should Discuss your case and not adding lots of information from the literature. It does not add up. And it is quite boring.

3. You have a made a hypothesis of erytroplasia. There were two lesions. Why did you make that diagnosis?

4. English is not OK.

5. The lesion did not disappear completely, but you have stated differently.

5. This is a contact reaction, supposedly. Why have you mentioned GVHD? There is no relation. It is confusing.

6. Patch test is O.K. But acrylic can cause a chemical reaction and not necessarily a Type IV reaction
