This paper is addressing a very important health subject about adolescent pregnancy in Nepal. I have only one main concern about the age of study participants and the study focus. In the background section the adolescent's age refers to age 15-19 and the legal age of marriage in Nepal stated as age 18. However, in this study data were collected among 14 to 24 years old women. At this point I don't see any argument about why this age group selected for this study. In the data analysis section (table 3, 4), the data was analyzed based on pregnancy under the age 20. It is not clear why age 20 was selected as a cut-off point (why not under age 18).
