Reviewer's report:

Most of the comments have been addressed. However, some grammatical/technical errors still can be easily found in the manuscript. Authors should check the manuscript thoroughly or seriously. All those errors should not be appeared in the published version. For example: Some data having spacing between the values and units/symbol but some are not (not consistent throughout the entire manuscript, please refer to the example of the latest published version of BCAM journal or manuscript guidelines). Decimal point for value of the pH should be dot not comma (some written as dot some written as comma). Some abbreviations should have subscript and superscript (such as O2-, KMnO4 and etc).
