Reviewer's report:

This is a manuscript dealing with a very important subject that advocate the value of oncology education in the medical schools.

The question posed by authors is clear and well defined

The title and abstract convey what was reported in results and discussion.

The methods used to reach the proper evaluation of the medical students who are learning oncology is very valuable. The data are sound and figures are appropriate. Also the manuscript adheres to the relevant standards and data deposition. We notice also that the discussion and the conclusion are well balanced and supported by data and the work limitations was clearly defined in the text.

The authors acknowledge the work of previous doctors and references are uptodate.

Although there are some spelling mistakes , yet the work is reasonable and valuable and language is acceptable.

Decision is to accept with minor changes.

I have no conflict of interest to disclose.
