This is a comprehensive, succinct, well written piece. It is interesting, informative and intellectually provocative. I strongly recommend it for publication.

My only quibble is a trivial one concerning the abbreviating of journal titles in the references. Some titles appear in full. Some are abbreviated. The Journal of Medical Ethics is referred to once in full and once in abbreviated form. It would, I think, be good if the editors of journals abandoned the use of abbreviations. Who benefits from it? It is a nuisance for both readers and writers even if a slight one.
