Title: Information needs for the Rapid Response Team electronic clinical tool

Version: 0 Date: 21 Jun 2017

Reviewer's report:

I think this is an important area of research. RRT team leaders often come in "blind" and the information they need is often difficult to obtain in the emergent situation. I think this research is a great starting point with more development and knowledge needed in order to create a report for the RRT that reflects the current standing of the patient. I would recommend a bit more discussion regarding the need for more research on the specific needs for information in an RRT situation especially a concise report of the event and what led up to the event. An electronic template to organize information needs is essential to an EHR. Thanks for your preliminary work on this.
