This is a really excellent and important study and some of the comments from the participants were very illuminating.

I have a few suggestions and comments.

In the abstract the results does not give any descriptions of your participants and there is also very little within the text about your methods. How representative were they, how did you go about recruiting them, how did you design your interview schedule

It would be good to see a little more about the policy context, which policies led to the creation of these purchasing structures. Is this unique to the UK.

There is an error with a reference on page 13 line 48/49 and a sentence which needs rewording on page 14, line 28.
