Title: Mapping the evidence on pharmacological interventions for non-affective psychosis in humanitarian non-specialized settings: a UNHCR clinical guidance

Version: 1 Date: 25 Aug 2017

Reviewer: Andrea Fiorillo

Reviewer’s report:

This version of the manuscript has been improved compared to the previous one. But still some major concerns persist:

1. Authors provide a definition of "treatment resistant schizophrenia", but at the end of the day reviewed papers include several different definitions of treatment resistant schizophrenia. The differences among included studies is a main limitation for the interpretation of findings and should be acknowledged among the study's limitation, Also, this methodological choice should be explained.

2. In the flowchart (Figure 1), authors report the adoption of long-acting injectable (LAI) formulations among strategies for improving adherence to treatment. However, there are no data in the manuscript regarding LAI. Please provide available evidence about the use of LAIs in LMIC and discuss this as an unmet need in those countries.
