Title: Parent–child cooking meal together may relate to parental concerns about the diets of their toddlers and preschoolers: a cross-sectional analysis in Japan

Version: 1 Date: 11 Jul 2019

Reviewer: Rebecca Clarke

Reviewer's report:

The authors have not sufficiently addressed several of the concerns previously raised. For example, corrections provided by the authors state incorrect information:

Lines 171-173

In the "not cooking together" group, the proportions of "picky eating (eating only certain foods)" (p = 0.034), "playing with food/utensils eating a meal while eating" (p = 0.007), and "he/she eats too much" (p = 0.036) were higher than in the "cooking together" group.

Table 3 shows that concerns about "he/she eats too much" was significantly higher in the cooking together group (p = 0.036) than in the not cooking together group.
