Reviewer’s report:

Para-occupational exposure to pesticides, PON1 polymorphisms and hypothyroxinemia during the first half of pregnancy in women living in a Mexican floricultural area.

The authors have adequately addressed the raised concerns and changed the manuscript accordingly. I find that the revised manuscript has been improved, and I only have some minor suggestions:

In the revised MS, results from analyzing DAPs in urine samples from a subsample of 65 women have been included. Information on how these 65 women were selected and the number of these women categorized as para-occupational exposed or unexposed, respectively, are lacking.

In the result section, it is not apparent that the DAP results are based on a subsample and not the whole group.
