Reviewer's report:

Dear Authors,

The presented manuscript reveals scientific interest, referring to the comparative evaluation of imaging tools, comparing them based on well-structured study methods.

The results show a practical relevance for the teams that are dedicated to interventional cardiology.

In order to a better clarification and discussion in this work, I make some minor observations:

- Clarify if the use of the ICE catheter and its navigation had associated any minor complications or effects at the level of the heart rhythm interfering with the procedure;

- Results of the experience of the operators regarding the stability of the ICE catheter in the right atrium and the facility in the imaging obtaining.

My best regards,
