Title: Mapping educational opportunities for healthcare workers on antimicrobial resistance and stewardship around the world

Version: 0 Date: 06 Aug 2017

Reviewer: Kelly Cairns

Reviewer's report:

This is a well written and very timely manuscript reviewing the availability of AMR and AMS education resources worldwide. The results of the authors work highlights an international need for AMS and AMR education that is reliable, freely available and up-to-date.

Whilst not the primary intention of this article, should there be a comment relating to social media and it's role in AMS and AMR education (or perhaps a comment that it is outside the scope of this manuscript)? Goff et al. address social media in Pharmacotherapy 17 May 2012. Additionally Goff et. al discuss available AMS education tools from five countries in Lancet ID Feb 2017.

As stated in the limitations, this manuscript is very heavily focused on the Americas and Europe. Australia was very underrepresented with a single initiative (#82). There are additional sites that would be valuable to include if a minor revision was to be undertaken: The Australian Commission for Safety and Quality in Healthcare (https://www.safetyandquality.gov.au/our-work/clinical-care-standards/antimicrobial-stewardship-clinical-care-standard/), Clinical Excellence Commission (http://www.cec.health.nsw.gov.au/patient-safety-programs/medication-safety/antimicrobial-stewardship/quah) and the National Centre for Antimicrobial Stewardship (https://www.ncas-australia.org/)

Page 3, lines 18 to 23 - should this statement about the inappropriate prescribing of antibiotics for conditions such as viral infections be referenced?
