Title: Being safe, feeling safe and stigmatizing attitude among primary health care staff in providing Multidrug-Resistant Tuberculosis care in Bantul District, Yogyakarta Province, Indonesia

Version: 0 Date: 23 Jul 2018

Reviewer's report:

This is an important and actual issue with a differentiated approach in investigating the feelings of health workers about the sense of security and stigmas related to multidrug-resistant care in Tuberculosis in Indonesia.

The lack of research on this aspect indicates its scientific relevance.

In general, the article is appropriate for different aspects in relation to: background, objectives, methods, results and conclusions.

However, I have some questions/considerations:

1) replace, in the abstract, the acronyms by the expressions;

2) how were participants selected to participate in the quantitative and qualitative phases?

3) Although it is a research of mixed methods, the quantitative results were privileged to the detriment of the qualitative results (of the in-depth interviews). Only one speaking of a participant was presented, regarding his/her feelings. In that sense, I suggest revising the methodological design and perhaps include only the quantitative results in this article. Another option would be to expand qualitative data.
