Title: Using a 'rich picture' to facilitate systems thinking in research coproduction

Version: 0 Date: 02 Aug 2019

Reviewer's report:

This is a very important and interesting piece of research. Both the method of co-production of the final product with the stakeholders involved through several iterations and discussions but also the use of visual graphic to capture the understanding of the programme is a novel mechanism for knowledge translation.

The authors have provided plenty of rich details about the process they undertook and the results within the manuscript as well as the appendices. I do not have any further comments on the manuscript other than it would be good to get a better understanding why the games such as snakes and ladders were initially considered as the format for the visual representation. There are other well understandable visuals and some further rationale or explanation would be helpful. Otherwise a very interesting study and the methods can be widely used and explored for different settings.
