Title: Understanding Resilience of Female Adolescents towards Teenage Pregnancy: A Crosssectional Survey in Dar es Salaam, Tanzania

Version: 0 Date: 29 Aug 2016

Reviewer: Martha Brady

Reviewer's report:

Interesting idea to link the reproductive resilience framework to the issues of adolescent girls "teen pregnancy" issues. Using Bourdieu's conceptual framework on "Capitol" -- social, economic, cultural, and symbolic capital" is also novel and a welcome approach to the topic.

Editing for English grammar would be helpful.

Distinguishing between 3 categories of girls would be useful: 1) "never pregnant girls, 2) pregnant girl, 3) young mothers. They are unique populations.

Need to understand the sampling frame a bit better. How representative are the 750 girls in this study?

Agree that more in-depth qualitative research around the capital conceptual framework would be warranted.
