Reviewer's report:

This is really good topic. The issue of resilience in SRH needs to given the attention it deserves and definitely programs must start to incorporate it in their work around adolescent SRH.

I feel this study could have been stronger if it had employed the qualitative method as well. The study seemed to have focused on proving its hypothesis. I am not quite confident that you examined how (as you stated in the conclusion) the various capitals which you have discussed were put to use to generate competence - the study had a lot of limitations (at least this is stated in the manuscript)

Is there a reason why the study only included girls from the urban cities?

The language used in the manuscript needs to be simplified.
