Title: Non-Structural Misalignments of Body Posture in the Sagittal Plane

Version: 0 Date: 23 Oct 2017

Reviewer: Michele Romano

Reviewer's report:

Considering that your article is not a scientific article but a detailed description of the possible postures of non-structural misalignments in the sagittal plane I strongly suggest writing much more clearly that the statements are the result of the notions of physiological anatomy described in some famous books combined with the experience of article authors.

For example:

- Line 42-50 specify that this reasoning is a theoretical and reasonable explanation and not a certain one.
- Line 121-124 even in these phrases pay the same attention. I suggest you do not use "Kyphotic posture due to non-structural pathology normally ... but ... Kyphotic posture reasonably due to non-structural pathology normally"
- Fig 4 and 5 Why is there a difference between the two supine positions? In Pic 4, the patient has his hands behind his head and Pic 5 his arms along his hips.
