Title: Endoscopic Central Airway Recanalization To Enable First Line Pembrolizumab Treatment In A PD-L1 Strongly Positive Non-Small Cell Lung Cancer: A Case Report

Version: 0 Date: 10 Dec 2018

Reviewer: Takashi Ohtsuka

Reviewer’s report:

The authors presented the case of lung cancer patient who underwent successful endoscopic airway recanalization followed by pembrolizumab treatment. After recanalization by rigid bronchoscopy and laser, SEMS was placed in the right main bronchus. The patient was able to receive pembrolizumab treatment.

The manuscript is well written and concise. However, this manuscript is unlikely to be of interest to readers journal of cardiothoracic surgery. In my view, this manuscript should be submitted journals focusing on lung cancer.
