Title: Primary cardiac dedifferentiated liposarcoma in a middle-aged female: A case report

Version: 0 Date: 27 Jul 2019

Reviewer: Rami Akhrass

Reviewer's report:

1- PET scans are limited in their ability in detecting intracranial metastasis. was brain MRI performed preoperatively?

2- In reviewing the CT images in retrospect, were there any findings that would suggest myocardial invasion / involvement.?

3- Is it possible that brain metastasis were secondary to dissemination from surgical manipulation/ incomplete resection?

The authors describe in their discussion heart transplantation as a treatment option in unresectable tumors. From their experience with this case, if preop testing were better in predicting that this could be unresectable, would they offered transplantation as primary treatment- considering the patient's symptoms may be secondary to the pericardial effusion that they described as significant
