Reviewer's report:

Everything is clear in the article; Problem is defined well, it is simple and clear. Their methodology is conducted well. Results were evaluated and illustrated well. However, I have a problem with the structure of your article. It seems the article is gathered from a research report which has been reported before. I mean article has a standard style in writing specially in lecturer review section. The problem is clear but reader wants to know whether any researcher has worked on this problem before or not. If yes, what was their result. Please add a related work section to the article and refer the others endeavors.
