Title: Tracheo-innominate artery fistula with continuous bleeding successfully treated through the suprasternal approach: A case report

Version: 0 Date: 05 Nov 2019

Reviewer's report:

I congratulate that the authors successfully treated with brachiocephalic trunk transection through the suprasternal approach in patients who had tracheo-innominate artery fistula. As the authors mentioned, tracheo-innominate artery fistula is a fatal complication after tracheotomy, which associated with severe infection and massive blood loss. I think that this case report has a little revision as follows.

1. After the transection of brachiocephalic trunk, is there aneurysmal change of aortic stump during followed-up?

2. In the suprasternal approach, did the authors dissect the rt. sternocleidomastoid muscle? Please describe the detail of approach methods.
