Reviewer's report:

All comments have been addressed except my comment related to the presentation of P values. You have stated in your response that p values are not presented because this is a simulation study. However, in your results section on page 7 in the paragraph titled 'Sex & left & right differences' you have stated twice that no significant differences were seen. How have you determined no significant differences were seen without running an appropriate inferential statistic? This is the reason I have asked for p values to be presented that demonstrate the level of significance.
