Title: Evaluation of a 27-gene inherited cancer panel across 630 consecutive patients referred for testing in a clinical diagnostic laboratory

Version: 0 Date: 22 Nov 2017

Reviewer: Caroline KIENTZ

Reviewer’s report:

This is an interesting article in its field. It corroborates the utility of multi-gene panels testing, and the need to go over traditional criteria.

This article has limits, as the authors said, as the lack of informations about personal and familial histories of cancer. How did they classified patients on Table 2 without these informations?

Furthermore, in Table 2, results were classified according to personal or family history of HBOC and/or LS. The authors could have mentionned the organ affected.
