Reviewer's report:

Dear author,

The paper needs the following essential corrections before being accepted for publication:

1. English language editing

2. Why was not bone marrow study performed in these cases? Pernicious anemia cannot be diagnosed without bone marrow aspirate and biopsy which are essential for confirming the diagnosis and exclusion of other hematological disorders like MDS or acute leukemia.

3. Defects of enzymes of homocysteine metabolism were not excluded in these patients as a possible cause of elevated homocysteine levels. Thus the conclusion is not solid enough and this point must be addressed.
