Title: Venous thromboembolism and hyperhomocysteinemia as first manifestation of pernicious anaemia: report of four originals cases.

Version: 0 Date: 28 Mar 2017

Reviewer's report:

The presentation style and the English language in the text are quite good. However there are major mistakes in the manuscript. For example, authors suggest the presented case reports demonstrate that pernicious anemia, on its own, can lead to hyperhomocysteinemia significant enough to lead to thrombosis. However they did not perform tests for cystathione β-synthase deficiency or MTHFR. Since the hyperhomocysteinemia in these patients may be due to cystathione β-synthase deficiency or MTHFR gene mutation, it is not possible for the authors to suggest that pernicious anemia is the only reason for thrombosis in these patients. Therefore this paper does not have unique scientific or educational value, which impact and enhance clinical practice or diagnostic understanding and it has to be rejected.
