Title: ECT for manic state with mixed and psychotic features in a teenager with bipolar disorder and comorbid episodic OCD

Version: 0 Date: 27 Aug 2017

Reviewer: Q X Ng

Reviewer’s report:

A pertinent and well-written case report. I enjoyed reading your article. I would like to offer the following comments to help improve its content:

Specific comments:

- Please change "precipitating mania" to "precipitate mania".

- In addition to the risk of manic conversion, attention has been addressed to a specific constellation of emotional and behavioral symptoms associated with SSRI treatment in adolescents, termed activation syndrome. Perhaps this could be briefly mentioned in the introduction as well.

- Please change "clinical course of a person's affective episodes" to "clinical course of a person's affective episode".

- Please change "increased stress" to "acute stress".

- Please change "She then was prescribed" to "She was then prescribed".

- Any previous suicide thoughts or behaviours?

- What were the patient's obsessive thoughts? Not much information is gleaned from the description, "mainly of sexual and religious character", provided.

- In addition to the patient's obsessive thoughts, did she have any tics, rituals or compulsions?

- Did the patient experience any visual or auditory hallucinations? Could schizophrenia be a possible differential diagnosis?

- Please change "sang and laughed inadequately" to "sang and laughed inappropriately or excessively".
