Title: Cultural adaptation of Internet- and mobile-based interventions for mental disorders: a systematic review protocol.

Version: 0 Date: 05 Mar 2020

Reviewer: Ioana Podina

Reviewer's report:

The authors propose a timely and original investigation of the cultural adaptation of Internet-based interventions for mental disorders. After a careful assessment of the manuscript, I did find their work interesting and relevant for both practitioners and theorists, as well, with a few comments that can be made:

1. Please mind the spelling, I found multiple spelling mistakes in the manuscript.
2. I would suggest planning to perform a comprehensive search also in WOS and SCOPUS; WOS being a must.
3. The authors mention - "The term psychological intervention is defined according to Kampling et al. (60)" The definition should be made clear in the manuscript and not left to a reference suggestion.
4. Is there a reason why the authors did not expand to internet and computerized, as well as portable (which includes mobile, tablet, etc)?
5. Is there a reason for excluding grey literature on such a topic that will render most likely only a handful of studies?
6. "Interventions must have been adapted to the target group. If the intervention was only translated but not otherwise culturally adapted, it will be excluded" - Please specify how detailed should a study be in order to be included in your review. Will it be included even if it mentions cultural adaptation only without any other details? What definition of cultural adaptation you work by?
7. Please add the search string that you will be using.
