Title: Social determinants of overweight and obesity in the mother-child binomial: Evidences from Mexico

Version: 0 Date: 02 Mar 2020

Reviewer: Ashleigh Lauren Wilson

Reviewer's report:

This paper investigates the influence of socioeconomic determinants on the weight of mothers and their children in Mexico. This investigation is interesting and the results are likely to be of interest to those working in health or to understand the transference of overweight or obesity from mother to child.

Although I do not have any concerns with the methods used or reported, I would like to recommend the following adjustments be made:

* The authors have not reported the variables used and their controls within the logistic regression model.

* P values were reported inconsistently throughout the paper and should be revised, along with the inclusion of confidence intervals.

* In order to increase the level of interest this article will receive from international audiences, I would recommend the authors review the paper for spelling/grammar and readability.

* It may be useful to report income in both dlls and USD to provide context for these readers.

* Additionally, the authors should review the referencing style used as an appropriate formatting style has not been applied.
