Title: Decision-making styles in the context of colorectal cancer screening

Reviewer's report:

I thank the authors for their work on the manuscript. I believe the background and rationale is much clearer now.

With regards to the statistical analyses, it is clearer to have the results in Table 4 which has been added, but it still looks as if all decision making styles have been entered together in one block, whereas it sounds from the comments that they were all tested individually. I think there is value in running the model containing all the styles together as the decision making styles are highly inter correlated. This would allow for control of the effects of other decision making styles and identify if they are independent predictors. There may be value in investigating the effects of the decision making styles individually and then in a combined model. However, as only two decision making styles were associated with CRC screening, this may be less relevant.
