Reviewer's report:

Dear Authors

The article entitled of Toward Personalized Molecular Feedback for Weight Loss is quite interesting. The rational for doing the study was justified and clear. Method was also described in detail. However, I noticed, some aspects of methods were described in the results section, not in methods section; it is suggested to remove to methods section. For example, in page 11, 2nd paragraph, in the 1st line, the authors described how BMI was measured. It should be not in the results section. There are many other similar description of method should be in Methods section, not in results part. Conclusion section should be rewritten, many sentences were repetitive what already explain in the background and methods should be excluded from the conclusion section.
