Reviewer's report:

Dear Authors,

The article points to a subject of important discussion. However, I think that following ethical issues in consideration of breastfeeding guarantee policies, in the face of indisputable supremacy, due to numerous factors already pointed out in the literature, this point should be raised in the introduction. I believe it is fundamental, even though it is an experimental study.

Due to the type of data analysis (basically descriptive), I think that more robust statistical analysis, even if it is an experimental study, would add to the study. I believe that the conclusion does not clearly answer the objective.

Are the methods appropriate and well described?
