Title: Using a Community-Engaged Research (CEnR) Approach to Develop and Pilot a Photo Grid Method to Gain Insights into Early Child Health and Development in a Socio-economic Disadvantaged Community

Reviewer's report:

The Photo Grid seems a great idea to prompt any community discussions, let alone those which were the target of this paper - those who are seldom heard (better label than "hard to reach"). But the authors do acknowledge that those who do not engage with services were subsequently not involved in the tool design and piloting. So it may not be the panacea we all hope it is. Apart from its continuing use in the project, it would be great if the authors had a plan to make the concept widely available.

The Plain English Summary contains quite a few "technical" words eg engagement, drafting, pilot, tool.

The community engaged approach did not manage to engage the full community, sadly. And I am a bit confused as to how a community engaged approach was able to review current methods of community engagement. But it seems like a good stab at the task.
