Title: A method for co-creation of an evidence-based patient workbook to address alcohol use when quitting smoking in primary care: A case study.

Reviewer’s report:

This is a really interesting article which clearly describes the study. It sets out an innovative approach that makes the link between evidence based practise and approaches that are sensitive to the community setting within which they are working. The article also clearly sets out the limitations of the study. The numbers involved are small and there may be some bias caused by the fact that a third of people invited to be involved did not attend the workshop that is at the heart of the study. This is an interesting piece of work which should be published.
