Title: Evaluating the acceptability of a co-produced and co-delivered mental health public engagement festival: Mental Health Matters, Jakarta, Indonesia

Version: 0 Date: 10 May 2019

Reviewer: Charlotte Connor

Reviewer's report:

A well written and explained paper. This type of event is crucial in the dissemination and education of mental health and it is encouraging to hear about such drives in countries outside of the UK. A few comments and potential additions to the paper are suggested. These include:

1. Are the authors considering more events of this nature? A problem with such drives is that they are often a 'one off'. This could be discussed.

2. It would be helpful if the age and gender of the personal quotes could be supplied.

3. Was the event aimed at adults or did it include children and young people?

4. The majority of people found out about the event through social media, with very small numbers getting to know about it through the traditional use of flyers or other organisations. The impact of social media on engaging with communities should be discussed.

5. What are the authors going to do with the evaluation?
